Our Community Living Program

SJIC offers a comprehensive behavioral health community-based residential program for individuals with chronic behavioral, substance use, and general healthcare issues, by allowing the individual to live in the community while being treated. Our priority is to provide protective oversight and opportunities for people to live as independently as possible while receiving treatment. Our programs focus on symptom relief and managing feelings, which is delivered through our four tenets enmeshed from counseling, health care management, community integration, and service coordination. Our integrated healthcare model helps to develop skills enabling members to live independently with minimal support.
